

A Remarkable Curiosity: Dispatches from a New York City Journalist's 1873 Railroad Trip Across the American West

Jerald T. Milanich

University Press of Colorado (Oct 31, 2008)

Unknown $26.95 (371pp)

978-0-87081-926-1

A Journalist's Sojourn: Take a pinch of Mark Twain, add a dash of Studs Terkel, and you'll have the recipe for Amos Jay Cummings' westward-ho dispatches for the New York Sun. Cummings was a man of his times: he was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor for bravery in the Civil War before he wrote for newspapers, and after his journalism career he was a member of the House of Representatives from New York until his death in 1902, at age sixty-three.

In A Remarkable Curiosity: Dispatches from a New York City Journalist's 1873 Railroad Trip Across the American West (University Press of Colorado, 978-0-87081-926-1), Jerald T. Milanich has compiled nineteen articles filed during Cummings' transcontinental adventure, thereby reintroducing the public to some of America's most lively human interest stories and travel writings. The editor has written more than twenty books and is currently a curator in archeology at the Florida Museum of Natural History and professor of Anthropology and Latin American Studies at the University of Florida. This collection brims with anecdotes about American originals who settled the West—farmers, gamblers, towns-folk, scoundrels, Native-Americans, prospectors, gunslingers, and Mormons—brought to life by one sharp newspaperman.

(August 18, 2009)

Disclosure: This article is not an endorsement, but a review. The author of this book provided free copies of the book to have their book reviewed by a professional reviewer. No fee was paid by the author for this review. Foreword Reviews only recommends books that we love. Foreword Magazine, Inc. is disclosing this in accordance with the Federal Trade Commission's 16 CFR, Part 255.