A boy visits his grandmother across the stars in this future-set galactic adventure. Starting at a space station that's littered with inventive aliens of every size and shape, the boy hops on a spaceship headed to Earth, where technology melds with the natural world. The boy and his grandmother float over wild horses and waterfalls and explore a cave, where he is amazed to find out that humans once lived with many wondrous creatures. It's a subtle message about conservation for the next generation.
