This entertaining book portraying adults as victims of naughtiness reveals to kids how their behavior can make all those nice adults feel rejected or afraid. The chaotic illustrations spark laughter while teaching compassion and gratefulness, such as when teary-eyed lions in a zoo dejectedly observe children hitting each other outside their cage or when an apron-garbed father bursts into tears after his son throws to the floor the plate of spinach he cooked with care. It's a fable bound to make kids both laugh and learn. Ages four to seven.
