

Feet of the Messenger: Poems

H. C. Palmer

BkMk Press (Oct 1, 2017)

Softcover $13.95 (80pp)

978-1-943491-10-0

Poetry's about butterflies and lips as soft as rose petals, right? Yes, bad poetry. Consider that poets come from all walks of life, including Vietnam War surgeons in a daily struggle to reconcile memories of the battlefield. And faced with the horrific imagery in some of these poems, we can only hope putting poetic words to paper brings some peace to H. C. Palmer. Currently, eighty-one year-old Palmer heads up a writing program for veterans in Kansas City.

*Last winter, at The Wall
again. Snowing & very cold.
It seemed we were alone
until a man & woman reflected in the granite from behind us.
For a long time I watched them inside the stone.
When I turned
I saw them weeping.
Do you have someone here? I asked.
Just the two of you, she said.*

MATT SUTHERLAND (November/December 2017)

Disclosure: This article is not an endorsement, but a review. The publisher of this book provided free copies of the book to have their book reviewed by a professional reviewer. No fee was paid by the publisher for this review. Foreword Reviews only recommends books that we love. Foreword Magazine, Inc. is disclosing this in accordance with the Federal Trade Commission's 16 CFR, Part 255.