

Fireside Stories: Tales for a Winter's Eve

Caitlin Matthews

Helen Cann, Illustrator

Barefoot Books (September 2007)

Hardcover $19.99 (96pp)

978-1-84686-065-2

"When the nights grow long and the days grow short, when summer is a distant memory and the cold and darkness of winter an ever-present reality, it is good to sit by the fireside and tell stories," the author writes. There's no better place to start than with this inviting collection of eight folktales from Europe and North America. Beginning with Halloween, it continues with the first snowfall, New Year's arrival, Twelfth Night, and concludes with spring's onset.

The stories range from the familiar Russian "Babushka," in which a childless yet loving old woman follows the Three Kings to find the Christ-child, to the lesser-known "The Cantor of the Trees," another Russian tale in which a young Orthodox Jewish boy's prayers and devotion save a huddle of trees from harsh winter storms. The stories also comprise many formats, from "The Bag of Warmth," a Slavey creation tale from Canada in which a wolf, fox, bobcat, and other animals steal the sun from the bear and return warmth to the land. In the mysterious Scottish tale, "The Lonely Boatman," a fisherman encounters unfortunate consequences when he breaks a promise on Halloween night.

A prolific writer on Celtic and British mythology, author Matthews is a writer, singer, and storyteller in Oxford, England. Some of her titles for children include Celtic Memories and The Barefoot Book of Princesses. Also no stranger to folklore is illustrator Cann, who was trained in fine art and illustration at the University of Wales. Her artwork has appeared in such titles as Brigid's Cloak: An Ancient Irish Story and The Lady of Ten Thousand Names: Goddess Stories from Many Cultures. In this collection, she employs watercolor, marbled papers, and other media to create brightly colored, patterned illustrations and borders with sumptuous attention to local detail.

The author introduces each tale with a brief reference to the time of year and culture. She ends with source notes, which provide more information about the stories' legacies.

While older elementary and middle school students will have no problems taking on these stories independently, the author's narrative style is most conducive for group readings. Gather round! (September)

Angela Leeper

(December 11, 2007)

Disclosure: This article is not an endorsement, but a review. The publisher of this book provided free copies of the book to have their book reviewed by a professional reviewer. No fee was paid by the publisher for this review. Foreword Reviews only recommends books that we love. Foreword Magazine, Inc. is disclosing this in accordance with the Federal Trade Commission's 16 CFR, Part 255.