

From the Redwood Forest

Joan Dunning Doug Thron Photographer

Chelsea Green Publishing Co. (October 1998)

$24.95 (272pp)

978-1-890132-11-8

From the Redwood Forest: Ancient Trees and the Bottom Line—A Headwaters Journey is the most intimate, well researched book on deforestation in the Northern California region that has been written to-date. Dunning brings her personal, nature-induced spirit and expertise to tackle authoring this pictorial essay filled with graphic reality, thanks to Thron's photography.

Dunning relays her own story of being drawn into the activism in the community's war between locals and Maxxam Corporation/Pacific Lumber Company to save the last of the 2,000-year-old redwood trees that remain—Maxxam being the "bad guy" in favor of logging to create more paper and picnic tables. Injected into this massacre of the last of the redwoods are the intricate domino effects on the cycle of life to owls, fowl, salmon, salamander, plant life, and, of course, human beings. Black-and-white sketches, illustrated by the author herself, add to the nurturing spirit and nature theme.

This book provides not only a platform for presenting the problems, at the risk of exposing a major corporation's deceptive tactics, but clearly takes one targeted arena of environmental devastation to elaborate on specific to generalized cause-and-effects.

Accolades again to Chelsea Green Publishing Company for another great primer on trees and forestry.

NANCY TAMBURELLO (January / February 1999)

Disclosure: This article is not an endorsement, but a review. The publisher of this book provided free copies of the book to have their book reviewed by a professional reviewer. No fee was paid by the publisher for this review. Foreword Reviews only recommends books that we love. Foreword Magazine, Inc. is disclosing this in accordance with the Federal Trade Commission's 16 CFR, Part 255.