

Hot, Hot Roti for Dada-ji

F. Zia

Ken Min, Illustrator

Lee & Low Books (May 2011)

Hardcover $17.95 (32pp)

978-1-60060-443-0

When Aneel's grandparents come from India to live with his family, he delights in their customs and stories about distant lands. He dreams of the villagers and animals introduced to him and is impressed with how his Dadi-ma chants while Dada-ji stands on his head in daily meditation. But the best tradition his relatives bring is the baking of bread, or roti, his grandfather's specialty. When the eager boy is finally entrusted with the recipe for the great-smelling staple he believes has strength-inducing powers, we learn what it means to feel grown up—at least a little. A light-hearted book filled with honorable intentions for ages four to eight.

(May / June 2011)

Disclosure: This article is not an endorsement, but a review. The author of this book provided free copies of the book to have their book reviewed by a professional reviewer. No fee was paid by the author for this review. Foreword Reviews only recommends books that we love. Foreword Magazine, Inc. is disclosing this in accordance with the Federal Trade Commission's 16 CFR, Part 255.