

The Mangrove Tree: Planting Trees to Feed Families

Cindy Trumbore

Susan L. Roth

Susan L. Roth, Illustrator

Lee & Low Books (April 2011)

Hardcover $19.95 (40pp)

978-1-60060-459-1

Japanese-American cell biologist Gordon Sato and his family were interned at Manzanar concentration camp during World War II, and he never forgot being hungry and learning to make corn grow in the California desert. This story recounts his successful effort in the 1990s to plant and harvest mangrove trees in an Eritrean village in order to prevent its people and animals from starving and help them to become self-sustaining. Exceptional collages made from scraps of paper and cloth, introduce readers to the children, shepherds, goats, sheep, and planters who made this dream reality. Ages six to eleven.

(July / August 2011)

Disclosure: This article is not an endorsement, but a review. The publisher of this book provided free copies of the book to have their book reviewed by a professional reviewer. No fee was paid by the publisher for this review. Foreword Reviews only recommends books that we love. Foreword Magazine, Inc. is disclosing this in accordance with the Federal Trade Commission's 16 CFR, Part 255.