Travel around the world, from the North Pole to the southern isles and all the mountains, rivers, and forests in between, to find out how the diverse animal inhabitants work together in this brightly illustrated survey of over a hundred reptiles, amphibians, birds, mammals, and more, featured together in their natural habitats and separately for more details. Find out which creatures are occupied as farmers, excavators, teachers, engineers, and navigators, or even brawlers, dancers, trappers, and bandits.
