

You Don't Have to Be Diabetic to Love this Cookbook: From Pasta to Pizza to Pumpkin Pie

Andrew Friedman

Tom Valenti

Workman Publishing (June 2009)

Unknown $19.95 (348pp)

978-0-7611-5550-8

Getting tagged with a diagnosis of diabetes is viewed by many food lovers as the culinary equivalent to a sentence of hard labor with half rations. No pasta, no high fat foods like duck or lamb or Kobe beef, no Ben & Jerrys Cherry Garcia. Cue the dark clouds over the dinner plate. In fact, “moderation” is a much better choice of words than “minimization” for most diabetics seeking a life-long dietary plan, according to super-chef Tom Valenti, owner of New Yorks celebrated Ovest and the West Branch. Hed also like diabetics to concentrate on the word “maximize,” as in learn to use acids (citrus, vinegar) in their cooking to brighten flavors on the plate. Valentis wonderful new book is devoted to showcasing the cooking techniques and food understanding known to professional chefs. They understand how food is perceived in the mouth; the subtle game of contrasting textures, temperatures, flavors, and even aesthetics to place attention exactly where deserved for maximum satisfaction. Diabetes is not a death sentence for food lovers, thanks to Valenti.

MATT SUTHERLAND (July 14, 2009)

Disclosure: This article is not an endorsement, but a review. The author of this book provided free copies of the book to have their book reviewed by a professional reviewer. No fee was paid by the author for this review. Foreword Reviews only recommends books that we love. Foreword Magazine, Inc. is disclosing this in accordance with the Federal Trade Commission's 16 CFR, Part 255.